

ASX RELEASE
31 OCTOBER 2025

Quarterly Report – Q1 FY26

Nex Metals Explorations Ltd (ASX:NME) (NME or the Company), a gold project explorer and developer, provides the following Quarterly Activities Report for the quarter ended 30 September 2025 (Q1 FY26) and the corresponding Appendix 5B.

Highlights:

- Executing Profit Sharing and Rehabilitation Agreement to progress the Kookynie Gold Tailings Project with the Wangkatja Tjungula Aboriginal Corporation secures a profit sharing for NME whilst also embedding cultural heritage, community training, and rehabilitation arrangements into one framework upfront
- Strategic entry into Egypt's Gold Eastern Desert with the North Henai concession, an already producing Gold project in one of the world's most under-explored prospective mining districts with significant potential for production and operational improvements using knowledge developed in the WA Goldfields
- Strengthened board with appointment of Mr Gregory Barnes SC as a Non-Executive Director with significant legal, governance and resources-sector experience
- Ongoing strategic and operational focus on developing Gold producing assets with a capital-light approach, applying best community and social practices

Managing Director of NME, Ken Allen, commented:

"This quarter has been strategically significant for NME as we enter Egypt's Eastern Desert – one of the world's most under-explored prospective mining districts – with a foothold project that has the potential to produce Gold on a larger scale than current operations with limited further capital expenditure."

"Another significant step towards production was the execution of the binding empowerment profit-sharing and rehabilitation agreement with the Wangkatja Tjungula Aboriginal Corporation for the Kookynie Gold Tailings Project. By addressing key concerns on heritage protection and rehabilitation upfront, we are derisking against future delays or disputes as well as showing good faith in entering these agreements with first nations corporations. NME prides itself on embedding these key ESG ambitions into its project planning and operations."

"Our strategy remains to take capital-light steps towards Gold production in Western Australia in a socially and environmentally responsible manner as well as production at our Egyptian project which has significant upside exploration and metallurgical potential."

Kookynie Tailings: Executing Empowerment Profit-Sharing and Rehabilitation Agreement

During the quarter, NME signed a binding empowerment profit-sharing and rehabilitation agreement (the PSA) with the Aboriginal custodians for ~30,000 km² of the north-eastern Goldfields, operating through Wangkatja Tjungula Aboriginal Corporation (WTAC). The agreement covers re-processing of historical mine tailings at NME's Kookynie Gold Tailings Project.

The PSA provides for NME to retain 65% of net ore sale proceeds (after reimbursable costs) with WTAC receiving the balance.

NME has secured a number of key social and commercial benefits for WTAC through this process, embedding key heritage and rehabilitation concerns into the agreements upfront, including providing for a training facility on WTAC lands to generate skills-transfer opportunities, and committing to a co-developed and co-monitored rehabilitation programme with WTAC. By taking this approach NME has secured strong support from WTAC whilst also derisking against future potential delays and disruptions to project development and operations.

Upcoming milestones at Kookynie include completing detailed metallurgical testwork and process planning which is expected to complete by the end of this year, and engaging with first technical trainees with WTAC early next year.

Egypt's Eastern Desert: the next frontier of production for NME

In September 2025, NME entered Egypt's Eastern Desert with an agreement to operate the North Hennai Concession in Southern Egypt (North Henai), partnering with Golden Eagle Mineral Resources Company and Shalateen Mineral Resources Company (SMRC).

NME has secured an agreement for a 44% profit share after a 100% priority cost recovery back to it, with its partners receiving the remainder of the profits.

Current activities at North Henai include small scale rudimentary Gold production. NME considers that it can deliver a significant improvement on Gold production volumes and recoveries with limited capital expenditure. Work is underway to explore improved mining techniques, improved metallurgical recovery, and a potential small heap leach at North Henai as first priorities.

The North Henai project is intended to be a foothold into is considered to be one of the world's most under-explored prospective mining districts.

Egypt's Eastern Desert already hosts the large-scale Sukari operation (owned by AngloGold Ashanti) and has infrastructure and skills, but remains vastly under-explored. NME expects that its geochemical methods exported from the Western Australian goldfields can add immediate value.

The agreements entered into for North Henai remain subject to completion of final due diligence by NME and entering into full form profit sharing agreements.

Beyond full form agreements, upcoming milestones at North Henai include definition of our priority production process improvements, planning a low-cost and targeted exploration programme using Western Australia style geochemistry, and ongoing engagement with our partners on operational expansion.

Corporate Overview

During the quarter, NME was pleased to appoint Mr Gregory Barns SC as Non-Executive Director. Mr Barns brings significant legal, governance and resources-sector experience, including prior non-executive roles in mineral exploration companies and experience as inaugural CEO of the Australian Gold Council. This appointment strengthens the Board as the Company enters a more complex phase of operations – balancing Aboriginal empowerment agreements in WA with international production in Egypt.
